To Whom It May Concern:

Mark Parsons did a fantastic job of building an addition onto our vacation house. As we were not present for most of the project, we depended on Mark to fulfill the dual roles of surrogate home-owner and project manager. Our trust was very well placed. Mark's communication (including emailed pictures) was fantastic. We knew what was going on at all times and were given concise information and options when choices had to be made or problems came up.

As with any building project, unforeseen challenges did present. Mark's technical skills, creativity and ability to problem solve kept things moving . The subcontractors he selected clearly met his standards for quality and outstanding workmanship, and the finished project is really a model of fine craftsmanship.

Mark is a really nice guy (also a bit of a perfectionist – a good quality in a builder) who made this project a real pleasure rather than the nightmare experience that so many building projects turn out to be. He has truly met his company's stated goal of " Building it right, on schedule and on budget."

Our addition is really stunning and looks like it was part of the original house.

Thanks Mark
